The 5-Minute Problem (read this first - it's the whole point)

- A lead contacted within 5 minutes is 21x more likely to qualify than one contacted after 30 minutes. (MIT / InsideSales Lead Response Management study)
- 78% of buyers work with the first agent who responds. (National Association of Realtors)
- The average agent takes 917 minutes - over 15 hours - to answer a new lead. (Inman, 2025)
- 48% of agents never follow up at all. (Inman / AgentZap)

Deals are not lost on price or presentation. They're lost in the gap between "new lead" and "first reply." This playbook closes the writing part of that gap. The last page covers the timing part.

How to get output you can actually send

Weak prompt in -> generic filler out. Every prompt in this playbook follows one formula:

1. Facts in. Paste the real details (the lead's message, the listing sheet, the stats). AI invents when you don't feed it - never let it invent a feature, a comp, or a price.
2. Set the job. Who's it for, what should it do (book a showing, restart a conversation, earn a click).
3. Set limits. Length, tone, and one clear ending question or call to action.
4. You decide. AI drafts. You - the licensed professional - check facts and compliance before anything reaches a client. Every time.

Compliance box (Ontario): Describe the home and the facts, never the people - no language about who a neighbourhood is "for," no demographic or school-quality claims (Ontario Human Rights Code / CREA rules). Verify every number against TRREB/your board data before publishing. If a draft says something you can't prove, cut it.

Part 1 - Speed-to-Lead: answer in minutes, not hours

1. First reply to a new lead

> "Write a short, warm first text message to a new buyer lead named [name] who asked about [property/area]. Under 60 words. Friendly, no pressure, end with one easy question about their timeline."

2. Website inquiry at 9 PM

> "Write an after-hours reply for my website: thank them, confirm I received their question about [topic], tell them exactly when I'll personally follow up, and include one genuinely useful fact about [area]. Professional, not salesy."

3. Old lead, new listing matches

> "Write a message to a past lead, [name], who wanted [beds/baths/budget] in [area]. A new listing matches. Make it feel personal, not like a blast. Use this specific detail from the listing: [detail]."

4. 'Just browsing' lead

> "Someone said they're 'just browsing, maybe next year.' Write a reply that keeps the door open without chasing: acknowledge it, offer a monthly market snapshot for [area], and ask permission to send it."

5. The 60-second Zillow/Realtor.ca reply

> "Write a 2-line text reply to a lead who just asked 'Is this still available?' about [address]. Confirm, add one interesting fact about the home, and offer two showing times: [times]."

Part 2 - Follow-Up: where the money actually is

6. Build my 14-day follow-up sequence (start here) (the most valuable prompt in this playbook)

"Build a 5-touch follow-up sequence over 14 days for a buyer lead in [area] with a budget of [budget] who went quiet after my first reply. Each touch: a different angle (new listing, price change, market fact, helpful tip, gentle check-in), under 50 words, never repetitive, never desperate. End each with one easy question."

7. The 7-day check-in

> "Write a check-in message to [name]. Reference our last conversation about [topic]. Add one new piece of value - a price drop, a new listing, or a rate change. End with a yes/no question."

8. After a showing, no feedback yet

> "Write a polite message asking [name] for honest feedback on [address], which we saw yesterday. Make it easy: what they liked, what they didn't, and yes / no / maybe."

9. Seller lead who never listed

> "Write a message to a homeowner in [neighbourhood] who requested an evaluation 2 months ago but never listed. One comparable home near them just sold: [address, price - verified]. Ask if they'd like their updated number. No pressure."

10. The break-up message (final touch)

> "Write a final follow-up to [name] after 4 unanswered messages. Polite, zero guilt-tripping, door fully open, easy out. Under 40 words."

Part 3 - Listings that get clicks

11. Listing description from raw facts

> "Write a listing description for [address]: [beds] bed, [baths] bath, [sqft] sq ft. Verified features only: [list]. Buyer type: [first-time buyer / family / investor]. Lead with the lifestyle, not the room count. 120-150 words. No clichés, no invented features."

12. One listing, 3 angles

> "Take this listing description: [paste]. Rewrite it 3 ways: first-time buyer, investor (numbers-focused, verified figures only), and family upsizing. Under 100 words each."

13. New-listing social post

> "Write a Facebook/Instagram caption for a new listing at [address] in [neighbourhood]. Hook in the first line. Feature: [standout detail]. End with a question that invites comments, then a soft DM call to action."

14. Just-sold post that builds trust

> "Write a just-sold post for [address]. Lead with the story, not the price: [days on market / multiple offers / first-time buyer]. Thank the clients without naming them. Offer a free evaluation to neighbours at the end."

15. Price improvement, no desperation

> "Write a post announcing a price improvement on [address], now [new price]. Frame it as opportunity. Highlight [feature] and who it's perfect for at this price."

Part 4 - Content: one hour a week, a month of posts

16. Monthly market update in plain English

> "Turn these verified stats for [area] into a market update a homeowner will actually finish: [paste stats]. Three short paragraphs: what changed, what it means for sellers, what it means for buyers. No jargon, no invented numbers."

17. 'Should I sell now?' post

> "Write a balanced post answering 'Is now a good time to sell in [area]?' using only these facts: [facts]. Honest about both sides. End with an offer to run the numbers for their specific home."

18. Neighbourhood spotlight

> "Write a neighbourhood spotlight for [neighbourhood]: who loves living there and why, 3 specific local highlights [name them], one honest thing to know before buying, and the current price range for [home type]. Facts only - describe the place, not the people."

19. Myth-busting post

> "Write a post busting this real estate myth: '[myth]'. Friendly expert tone, one real example, this stat: [stat]. End with 'questions? Ask me anything.'"

20. Past-client check-in that earns referrals

> "Write a warm check-in to [name], who bought in [area] a year ago. Ask how the home is, share one true update about their neighbourhood, and softly ask if they know anyone thinking of moving."

Part 5 - Hard moments & closing admin

21. Buyer lost a bidding war

> "Write a message to [name], who just lost a bidding war on [address]. Honest about the disappointment, one lesson from this loss ([lesson]), and a clear plan for the next one. Steady, not cheerful."

22. Seller wants an unrealistic price

> "Write talking points for a seller who wants [their price] when verified comparables say [data price]. Respectful, evidence-based, with a plan: list at the data price and review together in 14 days. Never condescending."

23. Expired listing outreach

> "Write a first message to the owner of [address], whose listing just expired. Acknowledge it's a frustrating spot. Offer one specific, honest observation about why listings like this stall, and a no-obligation review of the numbers. No bashing their previous agent."

24. Open house invitation + reminder

> "Write two messages: (1) an invitation to my open house at [address], [date/time], featuring [feature]; (2) a same-day reminder - 2 lines, friendly urgency, no hype."

25. Review request after closing

> "Write a message to [name], one week after closing on [address], asking for a Google review. Thank them for one specific thing: [detail]. Include the review link [link]. Frame it as a 30-second favour."

The honest catch

Prompts fix the writing. They don't fix the timing - and timing is where the 21x lives.

A buyer who messages at 9:40 PM and hears back tomorrow has already been answered by someone else. You can't be awake for every lead, and you shouldn't have to be.

That's the system version of this playbook:

- Lead Rescue (Atlas) - every new lead gets a personal-feeling reply in under 5 minutes, 24/7, and the follow-ups keep going until they answer. CAD $99 setup + $29/month, first month free.

- Free Missed-Lead Audit - we count how many of last month's leads waited too long. No charge, no pitch deck, just the number.
